Council's 'No' to new plans for Market

GREENWICH Council's Planning Board has rejected an application to redevelop Greenwich's historic covered market.

The application - from Greenwich Hospital Estates - would have seen the construction of a new development including new retail space, offices, a 104-bed hotel, together with a modern cover for the market.

The Planning Board heard from residents, traders, and other interested parties, as well as local ward councillors. There were speakers in favour of the development as well as those opposing it.

Councillors unanimously rejected the application on the grounds that it was an over-development of the town centre. They also believed that the proposed materials were out of keeping with the historic nature of the town centre, and that the scheme could add to traffic congestion in the town centre.

Council leader Chris Roberts said: "The Council is not opposed to new building in the town centre, but it has to be in proportion to the area's existing buildings and in keeping with the area's unique heritage."

"Councillors felt on balance that this scheme was not the right one for the town centre, and therefore we voted to reject the application."

An application to build a temporary replacement market in the grounds of the Old Royal Naval College, which had also been submitted, was subsequently withdrawn from the agenda.

The decision is subject to appeal by the applicants.

In my opinionWhy we should go for 'soft'

TO me, if a young person dies in an intensive care unit and their organs are not donated, that's a waste. I remember the tragic case of a young man, aged about 20, who was killed in a road traffic accident. Not one good thing came of it. He was dead. The family were devastated and, in their grief, didn't want to entertain the prospect of organ donation. Yet when relatives do say yes, they can gain solace because there's something tangible left behind that's a marker for someone's life. Organ donation is incredibly important. But we have ever-increasing waiting lists of people needing a transplant. It's around 8,000 at the moment, but in 2003-4 it was 6,061. We should move to the same system of "soft" presumed consent as in Spain. There, people are assumed to have agreed to their organs being removed unless they have refused permission or their family objects at the end of their life. Donation rates there are three times ours, yet a recent ICM poll for the BBC found that 66 per cent of people said they supported presumed consent. When it looks like a patient is brain dead, the family should automatically be approached by a professional, compassionate, knowledgeable person to talk about organ donation. That is done in some places, but staff aren't consistently good at it. Some doctors in hospitals are not approaching families. Some doctors simply don't raise the subject. The Organ Donation Taskforce has proposed making payments to hospitals to cover the extra costs to intensive care units of looking after patients until their organs can be transplanted. Personally - and I accept that this is a controversial point of view - I also favour the state paying some or all of an organ donor's funeral expenses. From a compassionate point of view, helping them have a decent burial would be a sign from society that we are grateful.

Six arrested in burglary crackdown

SIX men have been arrested following an intelligence-led operation by the Shooters Hill Safer Neighbourhoods team. Two men were arrested for "going equipped". They were carrying a bag of over 40 tools modified to break into cars and homes.

One man was arrested for driving a stolen motorbike and was also in breach of his curfew, while another man was caught acting suspiciously and arrested after a short car chase. Two further individuals were arrested for driving a suspected stolen vehicle, possession of offensive weapons and driving without licence or insurance. PC Bill Smart, from the Greenwich Borough Intelligence Unit, said: "The tools were part of the most sophisticated burglary kit I have ever seen." Cllr Maureen O'Mara, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for neighbourhood services, said: "This operation has prevented a number of burglaries in the borough, which is a great result for the community."

CONGRATULATIONS: prizewinners delve into their goody bags at Charlton School Summer playscheme

Aiming to please!

YOUNGSTERS who gave their views on future services for disabled children were rewarded with ipods and shopping vouchers.

Four lucky winners received their gifts last month after taking part in a consultation arranged by Greenwich Council. They commented on the Aiming Higher for Disabled Children scheme which is set to bring about improved services, give more support to families so they can take short breaks and also give disabled children and young people a greater say in their future needs.

The council recently agreed how it would spend an extra £585,000 of government funding to support the developments over the next two years.

This includes £100,000 towards the redevelopment of the Wensley Close Centre and £50,000 for specialist outdoor play equipment, allowing families to take all their children to the same play areas.

The winners and their families received their gifts from Cllr Jackie Smith, Greenwich's cabinet member

Prize time for young people who gave views on services for disabled

It's crucial that we talk directly to disabled children and their families for children and young people, when she called in at the Charlton School Summer Scheme.

During her visit Cllr Smith told GT: "It was great to meet the winners and their families and also see some of the great work which took place at the Charlton Summer Scheme.

"It's crucial that we speak directly to disabled children and their families to make sure that we prioritise those things which will make a real difference to their lives. Aiming Higher for Disabled Children puts their needs at the heart of our plans and we are determined that they can continue to shape the future improvements to help support their families."

It was the first year that special schools were commissioned to run their own summer schemes fitting in with the new policy of giving disabled children and their families a greater say in changing future services.

Summer scheme co-ordinator Corrinia Vincent, who also teaches autistic children at Charlton School, spoke about some of the highlights of the four-week programme which included swimming, bowling, and going to the cinema.

"We went to the London Wetlands Centre with almost 70 children which was a fabulous day. We also went to the Woodlands Farm where the children made mosaic tiles and fed the animals," said Corrinia.

Prizewinner Bethany Green, 13, who plumped for shopping vouchers, loves arts and crafts. The Thamesmead teen is now looking forward to starting back at Plumstead Manor School in Year 9.

She said: "I haven't decided what to spend the money on yet. I was going to get a mobile, but I'm hoping to get a new one for Christmas anyway."

Fourteen-year-old Charlton School pupil Tony Brown loves football and is a veteran member of the Charlton young person's disabilities Football Team. He also swims for the Lions Swimming Club in Eltham and enjoys playing snooker with his grandad at his local Catholic Club.

Grandad Raymond said: "He's really enjoyed it over the summer. He's come home on many nights and talked about all the new people he's met."

Scouts sleep out to help Shelter

by Pat Greenwood

SCOUTS-in-a-box have been learning what it's like to be homeless – the practical way.

Members of 1st Royal Eltham (Alpha Troop) staged a sponsored sleepout for Shelter in mega-boxes provided by Sainsbury's supermarket on the Greenwich peninsula.

But, before darkness fell, the 10-to-14-year-olds, backed by still younger friends, had already done four hours of collecting for the national support charity outside Eltham Sainsbury's, just off the High Street.

Proud troop leader Miriam Stratton told GT: "All in all, they raised £153 during two two-hour sessions at the supermarket, and about £300 in sponsorship has already come in. Many thanks to everyone who is supporting us, including Lisa Grayson from Sainsbury's."

"The research the scouts have done on homelessness and the sponsored sleepout will go towards their 'Global Challenge' badge as well as their 'Promise Challenge' parade service at our neighbouring church of Holy Trinity in Southend Crescent. The scouts then decided they wanted to do a 'sleepout' at our headquarters for themselves."

When they got back from collecting at Sainsbury's, they gathered wood for their fire and cooked chicken korma and rice for their tea.

There was hot chocolate and marshmallow-filled tea-cakes when they'd brushed their teeth and got into their pyjamas.

But it took until about 11.30pm for them to settle down in their sleeping bags – covered with plastic survival-bags – inside the boxes.

Miriam said: "There was a lot of rustling from our local toads and plenty of mosquitoes too."

The grand finale was a breakfast of eggs, bacon, beans, tomatoes and bread and butter – again produced by the young people themselves – and a big clear-up before heading off home at about noon.

Keen cub Nathaniel, nine, a pupil at Montbelle Primary School in Milverton Way, told GT: "I've done one with the scouts before, and I'd certainly do it again! My box kept falling down on me – but I didn't wake up until 8am."

The troop meets on Tuesday nights, and new members are always welcome. Find out all about them by visiting www.1stroyaleltham.org.uk

Bombed out of No. 17

I READ with interest your letters on 'The Way We Were'. At the time of the "land mine" I was living at 17 Charlton Park Lane with my mum, dad and three sisters. We were in the Anderson Shelter when police and ARP wardens appeared blowing whistles and shouting to evacuate the area. We were told a bomb could explode at any time. We did not know at the time, but we were lucky, because the parachute harness became entangled with the telegraph wires and chimney stacks allowing a 20-minute delay before the explosion. My dad and I went back the next day to survey the damage. We could not believe the amount of destruction. The first eight houses, numbers 1 to 15, were destroyed.

The council rehoused us on Indus Road. After some three years we returned to No. 17! The council made our house habitable under the war damage scheme. I was now 14, left school and started work. D-Day had passed and V1 and V2 attacks had started, Doodling along...

WHEN I was just a lad (about 12 years old) living in Kentish Town, my mother sent me on an errand to our local market to get the usual potatoes, which were King Edwards, 7lbs for 6d (sixpence in old money). And dawdling back towards home up Allcroft Road, I heard the all too familiar drone of a V1 flying bomb. I instinctively looked up to see it was as I suspected. The terrifying 'Doodlebug' appeared to be following me up Allcroft Road, only just above rooftop height. Then the engine stopped, and I knew only too well what that meant, I was soon to be annihilated. I started to run towards what I thought was away, but instead I was running within the path of the bomb's flight, in other words towards the point of impact. Fortunately, the "monster" was travelling much faster than I was and landed with a mighty explosion almost a mile ahead of me in a children's paddling pool on Parliament Hill fields, which was fortunately devoid of children at the time. But my Mum got her King Edwards and didn't take much heed to my story, which was just another part of life in those days.

DURING the move from our house in New Cross a collection of old family photographs, postcards and notes was discovered in the loft. They belonged to the Barlow family who lived at 73 Eastney Street, Greenwich, during the 1940s. A couple of photos feature young men, one dressed in naval uniform and the other in the uniform of the British Army Air Corps. My research has shown that both young men died in the war. Able Seaman Jack Barlow lost his life on HMS Dulverton in 1943 and James William Barlow died in Holland in 1944. I would love these personal photographs to be returned to descendants of Jack and James, the sons of Alfred Alexander and Eleanor Barlow who moved from Greenwich to Gellatly Road, New Cross. I would be delighted to hear from any relatives of the Barlows through GT.

Wayne's new world

Family joy after dad's transplant

by Peter Cordwell

HE'S got his colour back, so his two boys don't call him Homer any more.

Wayne Boden, the dad whose life seemed to be ebbing away in front of his family's eyes, is a totally new man following a successful liver transplant in June.

Wayne, 43, featured in GT's 10-week campaign to get more people in Greenwich to join the NHS Organ Donor Register. But we feared the worst as the jaundiced father of Jack, 15, and 12-year-old Charlie seemed to be getting weaker and weaker as well as not having one of the most common blood groups for a match.

All that is history now as the lift company engineer is on the up again.

Wayne said: "I got the phone call at 5.30 in the morning and it was like the Keystone Cops. I was at my girlfriend's and we were running around bumping into each other after getting the voicemail from my dad.

"I didn't know if I was excited or scared. We got my stuff together and went to my dad's, where the ambulance was waiting. We got the works, blue lights and siren, and in 15 minutes we were pulling into King's College Hospital.

"I was so high when we got there I don't think I needed any anaesthetic! This is what I'd been waiting for. I told myself to calm down and get a perspective on it all."

Wayne's three brothers and his girlfriend Michelle were there as well as his dad and two sons. "As the patient I could see the tension on everybody's face and of course

I had to say goodbye to everyone before the operation, which was awful," said Wayne. "I was taken up to theatre on the third floor. There were about 20 people there waiting to greet me. I can't praise them enough. They didn't do anything without explaining it - they were wonderful."

Wayne was back in intensive care eight hours after the transplant carried out by Professor Nigel Heaton - and the liver was working straight away. "I was under sedation but my dad said my colour had come back immediately," said Wayne. "Then I was waking up with various things being taken out of me. The nurses in intensive care were with me 24/7 and just wonderful. I don't think a member of the Royal Family would have got any better treatment.

"I woke up and saw my dad and my girlfriend, and I thought, I've recovered! I'd said goodbye to them but now I was seeing them again. It was great.

"Some friends who came in from work said I should do the Lottery now, but no amount of money could compare with how I feel now. I think being a positive thinker has helped and now I'll try and help out as much as I can in terms of any experiments the hospital wants to carry out."

Wayne's mentor Tony Belgrave, from Abbey Wood, who has also had a liver transplant, has been another great support to him. "Tony's been there for me all the way," said Wayne. "Michelle phoned him and he was there at the hospital with my family."

Wayne has not yet enquired about the organ donor who saved his life, but he told GT: "I can only tell the donor family: God bless them. They haven't only made my life happier but a whole family as well.

Their tragic loss has given joy to lots of people.

"The Greenwich Time campaign was fantastic, in my opinion. I'm sure lots more people would join the register if they saw the difference it could make to so many lives."

• THE number of Greenwich people on the NHS Organ Donor Register increased by 1,400-plus during the GT campaign. Sign up now by calling 0300 123 23 23 now (open 24 hours).

This week the borough's youngsters look forward to going back to school. Seventy years ago, they were boarding buses and trains to escape the Blitz. This weekend wartime evacuees tell their stories at a special Firepower event. FOND FAREWELL: A friendly bobby offers some reassurance

Packed off for a great escape

WARTIME evacuees tell their stories in a moving day of memories and nostalgia this weekend.

With enemy bombing expected at the start of World War Two, the youngsters were sent away as part of the most concentrated mass movement of people in Britain's history.

On Saturday, they talk about their experiences for Wartime Evacuees Day on Saturday, September 5. The event takes place at Firepower, the Royal Artillery Museum, on the Royal Arsenal from 10.30am to 5pm.

The day will include an exhibition of evacuee memorabilia by members of the local Evacuees Reunion Association, archive films and living history re-enactors. Visitors will also have a chance to meet and talk to evacuees themselves about their experiences seven decades ago.

Their evacuation was part of Operation Pied Piper which took place over the first four days of September 1939 when nearly three million people, mostly school-children, were transported to places of safety in the countryside.

BAGS PACKED: scores of children line up to get on buses and trains heading out of the capital in September 1939

Firepower's Eileen Noon explained that the authorities did not want chaotic scenes at London's train and bus stations so insisted that parents said goodbye to their children in school playgrounds where they had to assemble.

"For some, evacuation was a welcome adventure and escape from their homes in London. But for others it was a terrifying and heart-breaking separation from their parents and their friends," said Eileen.

"Nobody knew when they would return to London or if they would see their home again. Our Wartime Evacuees Day will give visitors the opportunity to meet evacuees and hear their stories first hand."

There will also be an exhibition about local people's experiences during the war entitled Woolwich and the Blitz.

And Firepower's own living history team will be on duty giving visitors a chance to meet and talk to a wartime ARP air raid warden, two Royal Artillery Gunners, and soldiers manning an anti-tank gun as well as Local Defence Volunteers – the forerunners of the Home Guard made famous in BBC TV's Dad's Army.

● Tickets for Wartime Evacuees Day are Discounted family tickets £12, Adults £5.00, Children £2.50, Concessions £4.50. More information at www.firepower.org.uk, call 020 8855 7755 or email info@firepower.org.uk

A wartime memory that will never leave me

I lived in Greenwich throughout the London blitz and recall so many terrible incidents. The one that will never leave me was in January 1941.

When war was declared, I lived at 3 Halstow Road. I was terrified in this house, always feeling something would happen there. If no-one was at home I would not go in the house alone.

Thankfully we moved to 5 Mycenae Road and used the shelter in St George's Church building in Westcombe Hill.

It was the middle of January 1941, the curate of the church was playing the piano for a hymn singing session, when suddenly there was an enormous explosion, just as we were singing the hymn 'Rescue the perishing, care for the dying.' We found out that a huge bomb had dropped in Ormiston Road, right opposite where I had previously lived. Ten people were killed and houses 5-11 were completely destroyed. Some of the injured were brought into our shelter and the house 3 Halstow that I'd been so afraid of was also down.

Had I been in the house I would have been sheltering in the cellar with the wrecked house on top of me. That incident still haunts me and I will never forget it amongst all the many bombs that fell in Greenwich.

We ♥ Thamesmead!

SEEING IT FROM ANOTHER ANGLE: children on school holiday had a great time learning to fish on Birchmere Lake

by Peter Cordwell

ENOUGH is enough for Thamesmead residents fed up with their town being kicked every time some cynical newsroom suddenly needs a space to be filled.

They turned to Greenwich Time to tell their side of their story of a community that's always had spirit and has multi-million pound reasons to be cheerful about the future.

We spent the best part of a day meeting and talking to various people across SE28, including a quick visit to idyllic Birchmere Lake, where more than 50 youngsters took advantage of a taster fishing lesson put on by the Environment Agency.

We'll give over the centre spread in the next GT to allow Thamesmead to kick back – not least through the emergence of Trust Thamesmead's 'Sporting Club Thamesmead' – but meanwhile here's our own taster on the subject.

Twelve-year-old Sam Frost is a typically solid young citizen who likes to get involved in the community. He was in the angling team representing Greenwich at the prestigious London Youth Games.

Sam said: "We had to catch as many fish as we could and came sixth out of 12 boroughs, so we did okay. What I like about Thamesmead are the lakes and open spaces."

"I love fishing and we've got three lakes – Birchmere, Southmere and Thamesmere. I use all of them. Today has been great fun, catching lots of fish as usual!"

The latest feature to knock

Residents fight back against the stories knocking their town

KICKING BACK: Thamesmead Town FC chairman Barry Stokley

Thamesmead was a recent Radio 4 programme calling it "the fraud capital of Europe" and labelling it "little Lagos", itself a slur on the former capital of Nigeria. There were some positive views expressed on the programme but, nevertheless, mud sticks.

Barry Stokley, chairman of Thamesmead Town FC for the last two years, can see the club shooting up football's pyramid as part of the £4.2million Sporting Club Thamesmead project that will increase sporting activity for the whole community.

Barry told GT: "It's all very positive and it's great to get the support from the local authorities. It's a great way to get the community together and it's our ambition to get the club into Conference football in three or four years time."

"It's exactly a development like this that will attract good players. Everyone wants to be associated with success, and the football being played here under manager Keith McMahon is second to none."

Barry himself has lived on Thamesmead since 1970. "I've seen a lot of changes over the years," he said. "I can walk to my house from here, so what more do I want? I've seen this estate being kicked all my life. I've chosen to let my two boys grow up here and they're happy. I've got so many good friends in the area. I'm angry that Thamesmead takes so much stick because there's no need for it."

"It's not perfect here but if they spoke to the people who live here, they'd get the true picture."

Jose pulling the right strings

by Peter Cordwell

JOSE Meneses has a great Wimbledon and has already been invited back next year.

No, not as a player but as a world-class tennis racquet stringer who literally adds to the tension at the game's biggest tournament.

The 43-year-old Portuguese, who loves living in Greenwich because of his own naval background, joined the Wimbledon team of stringers for the first time this year and absolutely loved it.

"It was unbelievable. There were 12 stringers there employed by a company called Apollo. It was very exciting. All the players have different tensions to their racquets and that changes on the different surfaces too."

Some of the top players have their own stringers – including Roger Federer and Andy Murray – but Rafael Nadal uses the stringing team. "He's a very nice and simple guy in that respect," said Jose.

The differences in the choice of strings are fascinating. "Roger's main string is natural cow gut mixed with a very strong polyester on the cross string," said Jose. "Murray is using polyester all the way around with no gut at all. It's just personal preference related to the feel of the racquet. I think the best feel is natural gut but it is not the most durable."

Me & my borough

Jose's stringing career started 20 years ago in Portugal while working as a receptionist at a professional tennis academy. "There was a string machine but no one knew how to use it. A stringer from Lisbon came for a tournament and in two weeks taught me the basics," he said.

"After that I improved by going on the internet and from books, then getting in a lot of practice at the academy because a good stringer needs to do it a lot."

"It's not about doing it quickly, it's about perfection."

Dozens of satisfied customers include Pat Cash, Marat Safin, Carlos Moya, Kim Klisters and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

A keen surfer in his native country, Jose was also a professional roller-hockey player there. He's from Oporto and banged his heart in respect to former FC Porto manager Sir Bobby Robson – "a great man who touched millions of hearts".

Jose also worked as a barman, waiter "and even as a pizza chef!" He added: "But this is my best job, stringing racquets. I was at Roland Garros (the French Open) in 2006 and did the job for Portugal in the Davis Cup against Ukraine and South Africa."

"It's great to chat sometimes to the star players. The atmosphere

I love the oceans and boats, especially old vessels, so I came to visit the Cutty Sark

at Wimbledon was fantastic, the company said I did a good job and they have asked to go back next year, so I'm very happy."

Jose works for the tennis-led Wigmore Sports store in the West End, stringing tennis, squash and badminton racquets, around 25 a day on his trusty machine.

He also strings racquets locally, using France's famous Babolat strings, at virtually half price. He's also being courted by Londontennis.com to be their resident stringer. He said: "It's a great website. You find courts, enter competitions, post your results and even sell your racquet."

When in Portugal, Jose chose the Navy for his two-year national service, so coming to Greenwich was almost a given for him. He said: "I love the oceans and boats, especially the old vessels, so one day I came to visit the Cutty Sark and went to the National Maritime Museum."

"I saw the park and the river. I rented a few places in other parts of London but nothing compares with Greenwich for me. I'm very lucky to live here and work in London."

Traders offer refuge to young people in fear

COMMUNITY MINDED: campaign organisers, traders and public show support for each other on Trafalgar Road

A safe haven on the streets of Greenwich

by Pat Greenwood

YOUNG London citizens aged eight and over are working with East Greenwich traders to help keep all children safe on the streets.

The youngest members of a charity which works for justice, respect and equality across the capital managed to get almost 50 shops and businesses along Trafalgar Road to put 'City Safe Haven' stickers up in their windows within the first three weeks of the local campaign.

The young people, led by London Citizens' reps from The John Roan School and the primary schools of St Joseph's and St Alfege with St Peter's, then got together with the businesses, community leaders and police for informal lunch and discussion at the Forum@Greenwich Community Centre.

Now the idea is that any child who feels isolated or threatened out on the street can go into a building displaying a 'City Safe Haven' sticker until help arrives.

Alex Okoibhole, aged nine, from St Joseph's RC primary in Commerell Street, was one of the speakers at the lunch.

She said: "What we are doing now is the first step to create places where all young people can feel safe - and where they can run to if they are in trouble."

She added: "None of this would be possible without our fantastic shopkeepers!"

Alex was at the get-together with fellow-London Citizen Bridy Purcell, 12, a traveller girl who featured on the front of GT in April. Bridy came along with her younger brother Johnny, 11, and mum Elizabeth.

Bridy, a student at St Ursula's Convent, Blackheath, told us: "I think this scheme is really good, and we're trying to get as many stores as we can to join."

Eddy Wong from Alacosta Coffee in Trafalgar Road was the first to sign up in Greenwich.

He said: "I think this is a marvellous idea. We are surrounded by schools where we are and we open at 8am. This is a small community, we see the families come past, we know most of the children, and we're watching them grow up."

Police Sergeant Andy McVicker, the leader of the Safer Neighbourhoods team for Greenwich Peninsula, said: "I think having this lunch is an excellent idea. It's all about working in partnership to try to resolve the issues that arise."

London Citizens Community organiser Sebastien Chapeau taught at St Joseph's primary for three years.

He said: "Our charity is all about bringing people together to work on issues for the common good."

He is currently building teams of all ages to campaign around the issues of safety, ecology, housing and education.

Spot check nets 4,000 illegal discs

THREE traders from Plumstead face prosecution after more than 4,000 illegal CDs and DVDs were seized by Greenwich Council trading standards officers.

The operation was part of a general exercise led by Greenwich Council to crack down on counterfeit goods being sold in the borough.

They ran a two-day operation carrying out spot checks in and around Plumstead High Street last month.

Officers found counterfeit releases of new Bollywood films, pornographic material and unclassified films without age ratings.

The traders concerned had ignored previous Trading Standards advice to sell legally classified and original films. Cllr Maureen O'Mara, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for neighbourhood services, said: "This sends out a strong message to traders that if they choose to ignore trading standards advice, they will be found and possibly prosecuted. I would encourage all businesses to follow the appropriate guidelines on selling legally classified and original films in order to avoid having their goods confiscated and even worse face prosecution."

Windows of opportunity for artists

A PAIR of Eltham shops were given a facelift after students from a local school dropped by with their arty ideas. Students from Crown Woods Secondary School brightened up the empty shopfronts in Eltham Arcade with an eye-catching art display.

The project was agreed by the arcade's managing agents Urban Property Ltd, the school and Eltham's town centre manager.

The arcade - just off Eltham High Street opposite the library - was built in the early 20th century and houses a cafe and several independent traders as well as a former ballroom which is now a DIY store. Many Eltham shops have reported an increase in customer spending despite the economic downturn, suggesting a wider renewed consumer confidence. And the vacant shops are a much more attractive prospect to potential entrepreneurs after being spruced up by the artisan pupils.

Options for brightening up other vacant units in the town are being examined, including possible mural artwork on shop hoardings.

Councillor Peter Brooks, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for regeneration, said: "It's extremely pleasing to see students from a Greenwich school showing off their artistic talent and helping to brighten up the day of passers-by. I'm sure that many people will find themselves stopping to admire the very striking works on display."

Street squad

New environment champions help to keep the borough clean

by Rod Kitson

NEW teams of community champions are helping to keep an eye on the state of our streets with the help of Greenwich Council.

More than 100 people have signed up to be Environment Champions who will work with the council to keep on top of community cleanliness.

Volunteers will report environmental issues to the council's Contact Centre as well as organise and participate in community clean up days in problem areas and carry out monitoring inspections of local streets.

The borough-wide scheme was launched by the council in July to support individuals and community groups who are already active in trying to keep the borough clean and green. It's also a chance for locals to have a say on cleansing issues and give feedback on the council's response.

A seven-strong team of Environment Champions were out pounding the streets of Eltham on a local street inspection earlier this month.

With clipboards at the ready, they were keen to report any unsightly mess to the council to be dealt with by Cleansweep, waste services or cleansing.

The streets are graded from A-D on cleanliness in a number of categories: graffiti - unsightly tags on walls and property; litter - street level muck like fast food wrappers and plastic packaging; detritus - the debris that collects by the kerbside, and fly posting - posters that have been daubed on disused shop fronts, walls and lamposts.

Volunteer Lisa Laber who is chair of a local housing panel, told GT: "I got involved because I want to make the streets better. I think we can make a difference - but the way to do it is to get out and find out how it works. If you say nothing, you get nothing. This is our chance to have a say."

And she added: "We did the alley, the park and around the local shops. We went out in a group with a council supervisor, but it would be nice to do it all on our own. We scored the area and said what we think needs doing. I'm really nosy, so I'm going to keep going back and checking that the plans we made have been implemented!"

New army on the march

BLACKHEATH Territorials welcomed Labour MP for Greenwich and Woolwich Nick Raynsford and London Assembly Member for Greenwich and Lewisham Len Duvall to the TA Centre in Wat Tyler Road at the end of last month.

Hollyhedge House is the home of 9 Platoon of the London Regiment's C Company (City of London Fusiliers) - the only Territorial Army infantry regiment in London. The platoon, which recruits from Greenwich and neighbouring boroughs, was established six months ago and now has a force of 32 soldiers that regularly attend its weekly Wednesday training nights.

The London Regiment provides infantry support to the regular army and is comprised of five Companies which are spread geographically across the Greater London area. It is a fully operational unit having deployed twice to Iraq in 2004 and serving on the front line in Afghanistan in 2007. The regiment is due to deploy to Afghanistan again in 2010. The visiting dignitaries were shown around the TA Centre's facilities by Platoon Commander Second Lieutenant Chidi Nwaonu and were given a presentation and the opportunity to talk to the soldiers firsthand to gain an insight into life in the TA, including the challenges and adventures they face. Second Lieutenant Nwaonu said: "The visit of Len Duvall and Nick Raynsford MP is a great boost for 9 Platoon. It shows that the impact we have had on the local area in such a short time has been noticed and it is a great morale boost for the troops that the time they sacrifice for the TA as well as their charity work has been recognised at such high levels". Fusilier Jonathon Matthews, from Lee said: "It was great to see these personalities visiting our TA centre. It's nice that the people who make the top decisions come down and see us from time to time." The soldiers from 9 Platoon come from all walks of life including students, engineers, project managers, nurses, teachers, security guards and the unemployed. The platoon is currently recruiting UK,

Irish and Commonwealth citizens between the ages of 17-43, male or female, for a variety of roles. The Platoon parades every Wednesday between 7.30pm and 9.30pm at Hollyhedge House, Wat Tyler Road, Blackheath, SE3 0JZ and can be contacted on 020-8672 1168 or via email on Blackheath_fusiliers@yahoo.co.uk

Borough BRIEFS

Rubbish dump case in court

A GREENWICH woman has received a 14-day jail sentence suspended for one year for dumping rubbish. Twenty-one year-old Carene Chambers was sentenced at the Mayors and City Court on August 7 after legal action was taken by Greenwich Council. The borough brought the case to court after a two year period in which Ms Chambers had been dumping rubbish outside her front door on Strongbow Crescent, Eltham. She continued to do this despite repeated advice and warnings from Greenwich Council about disposing of household waste correctly and responsibly. She also ignored a court injunction requiring her to stop dumping rubbish. Councillor Maureen O'Mara, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for neighbourhood services, said: "Littering and fly-tipping will not be tolerated here in Greenwich and we take a very hard line on those caught. It's not only unsightly but can also pose hygiene and environmental risks. We are pleased the vast majority of our residents take a real pride in the cleanliness and appearance of their borough and we will take action against the minority whose actions blight the lives of everyone else."

Doors open for Open House

MANY of the borough's iconic buildings open their doors to the public this month for the annual Open House weekend. There'll be free admission to a range of buildings on Saturday and Sunday, September 19 and 20 from museums and yacht clubs to Children's centres, churches and private homes. The weekend is part of Open House London - the capital's annual celebration of architecture and there'll be more than 700 activities taking place across London including talks and tours, visits and debates and access to the teams that design and regenerate London. Councillor John Fahy, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for culture and Olympics, said: "Open House London is a great opportunity for residents and visitors to the borough to visit the huge architectural wealth that Greenwich possesses. It's the one time of the year when so many of the country's most iconic buildings open their doors free of charge and I would encourage everyone to take advantage." A treasured trail

Locals help plan future care of popular footpath

by Hilary Bryan

A POPULAR pathway that leads to beautiful open spaces and waterways in Thamesmead is the subject of a special feature film to be shown later this month.

The 10-minute documentary - The Ridgeway: Through your Eyes - is having an outdoor screening underneath the arches at Harrow Manor Way flyover, Thamesmead, from 7pm on Friday, September 11.

The film outlines plans for the Ridgeway - a three and a half mile path that runs from Plumstead Railway Station through Thamesmead to Crossness pumping station. The elevated pathway sits on top of a Victorian sewer and provides a green link to a network of open spaces and waterways in Thamesmead and Erith marshes. But it has also tended to become a focal point for fly tippers, joyriders and other forms of anti social behaviour. The film is part of the

TRAIL BLAZERS: members of the Plumstead Runners use the pathway for a race

Ridgeway masterplan - an action plan designed to improve maintenance, care and use of the thoroughfare and link it to other routes in the area. The video includes comments from 60 residents, visitors and local community groups including the Plumstead Runners, the YMCA sailing club and Thamesmead Youth Forum. The film is part of an hour-long presentation which also includes the screening of an archive film showing the development and early days of the Thamesmead area.

Locals can also see a draft document of the Ridgeway Masterplan which has been produced in consultation with landowner Thames Water and local people by Greenwich and Bexley Councils in a joint project. The event will include refreshments, reed weaving and a chance to win an i-pod.

The boroughs are working with Design for London, part of the London Development Agency, which works with the London boroughs to create well-designed urban projects.

Cllr Peter Brooks, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for regeneration, said: "The Ridgeway is a green corridor much valued by the adults, young people and children who use it as a footpath, as a place to play, a place to forage and simply as a place of tranquil natural beauty.

"Part of the aim is to create a greater sense of safety and we hope that this masterplan will help regenerate this valued green space and unite local communities in helping to care for it."

PROVISIONAL GCSE results for the borough show increases for those receiving 5 or more GCSEs at A*-C and also 5 or more GCSEs at A*-C (including Maths and English).

This year, 62% of Greenwich pupils have received 5+ GCSEs at A*-C, a rise of 4.3 percentage points over last year. The numbers achieving 5+ GCSEs (including Maths and English) have risen by 2.9 percentage points to 43%.

Greenwich has seen consistent improvements in GCSE attainment levels over the past few years. Since 2006, the percentage of pupils achieving 5 or more GCSEs at A*-C has risen by 19 percentage points. Over the same time, the rise for those achieving 5 or more GCSEs including English and Maths, has risen by 11.6 percentage points.

Welcoming the success of pupils, Councillor Jackie Smith, Greenwich cabinet member for children and young people said: "These positive GCSE results follow last week's good A Level results and show that the overall picture for Greenwich pupils is bright. They represent fantastic personal achievements and a great springboard for further education and training.

"The results show that most of our schools have seen substantial improvement over the past few years. Where there are outstanding issues or concerns, we will continue to work with schools to address them.

"Given the concerns there are about the pressure on jobs in the current economic climate, it's crucial that young people are given the best opportunities to succeed. The council is clear that as the borough continues to regenerate, young people in Greenwich are best placed to reap the rewards of future economic success."

Greenwich Council's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

Edition 150

How the lettings policy works

Housing applicants are placed within "Bands" according to the Council's policy for letting homes. Your band information is on the letter that the Council sent you when you registered, or when your circumstances changed.

Property adverts say which band can apply and any other criteria. When all the bids are received, the property is then offered to:

For properties advertised for band A and band B - the applicant who has had this priority status for the longest time.

For properties advertised for band C applicants - the applicant who has been registered on the Council's list for the longest time.

Band

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the council must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.
- C is for all applicants on the housing register, including those that are in priority bands A and B.

How do I apply?

1 Get on the list

First, you've got to be on the housing waiting list to join the scheme. If you're not, get an application form by phoning the Access and Allocations Section on 020 8921 2941. Or pick up a form from any neighbourhood office.

2 Find your applicant number

It will be on the letter you've already had from the Council about the new scheme. You'll need that number and the reference number of the property you're after, which will be on the advert.

3 Pick out your ideal property

by looking in Greenwich Time or regularly checking the website:

www.greenwich.gov.uk/homes

Click on your preference on the website. If you don't have a computer, you can always use one for free in either your neighbourhood housing office, library or UK Online centre.

4 Apply in one of two ways

- Phone the 24-hour hotline 020 8921 4340. It's an automatic push-button system and calls will be charged at the normal local rate, or
- Via the Council's website

Comedy festival returns to the borough bringing a gaggle of gags and loads of laughter

by Rod Kitson

SET your jaw to 'ache' and sides to 'split' as the Greenwich Comedy Festival roles into town this month. Big name performers from the world of stand up and beyond, include Jo Brand, Rich Hall and Russell Howard. Russell is a regular on topical news-based panel show, Mock the Week - hosted by Dara O'Briain - and Jo has been on the circuit for decades. American comic Rich Hall's deadpan style has made him a favourite of British audiences over the years, and putting in a rare live appearance at the shindig is Manchester punk-poet John Cooper Clarke. The festival is held over four venues from September 7-13, with the main hub in the grounds of the Old Royal Naval College. Greenwich Theatre hosts acts nightly from Monday 7 to Friday 11. Names at the theatre on Crooms Hill include BBC grumpy old man Arthur Smith, and change-the-world activist-comic Mark Thomas. The recession has provided much material for comedians, and Thomas has jumped the wagon with a show called 'It's the Stupid Economy,' which - if you're lucky - may be audible over the rustle of Guardians and Fair Trade sweet wrappers. More light-hearted and off beat laughter is served up from Adam Buxton - he of

ALL THE BEST LINES:
veteran comic Arthur Smith is a big draw for the festival that runs from Sept 7-13

Adam and Joe fame - with the Evolution of Music Video at the theatre on Friday, September 11. Greenwich has a rich history of comedy, with the Up the Creek club still a weekly sell out on Fridays and Saturdays. Founded by comedy legend Malcolm Hardee - who sadly drowned accessing his floating pub moored on the Thames in 2005, the club followed Hardee's earlier venture, the Tunnel Club on Tunnel

Avenue. He is credited with persuading Jo Brand on to the comedy circuit. The club on Creek Road is on board with the festival, but it's pretty much business as usual as the Friday and Saturday shows are present and correct. The only notable change to the weekly itinerary is a Sunday Special on - you guessed it - Sunday, September 13. Laughter all round then. Well, no, actually. For punters who like the quiet life there is a Silent Disco on September 12. As bizarre as it sounds, the headphone-based dance-fest won't be keeping the neighbours up, and it's the only part of the festival where silence is golden.

The disco takes place at the Old Royal Naval College between 9pm and 1am. Tickets are £10. Ticket prices and show times for other acts vary. For full details visit www.greenwich-comedyfestival.co.uk

Behind the scenes

New season brings new excitement

THIS week at Greenwich Theatre we went through one of the most nerve-wracking moments for a theatre - the launch of a new season. Having spent as much as two years working on some of the productions planned for the venue this autumn, the season launch is the moment when we find out whether audiences are as excited as we are about what we are offering. What's more, this particular season really does set out some of our ambitions for the future, so the reaction of our audiences is all the more important.

One of the biggest stories in this new line-up is a return to producing some of our own work at the theatre. Thanks to a new partnership with film company Stage on Screen, we are well underway with preparations for new productions of the classic plays Doctor Faustus and The School for Scandal for this October. As we usually arrange visits to Greenwich for shows which are already out on tour, the excitement of bringing together a fantastic cast, running rehearsals and employing a team of designers, costumiers, choreographers and prop-makers to work on the shows lifts the theatre to a completely different level. This is our chance to show audiences what we can do ourselves, and having recruited a team with extensive experience of working for the Royal Shakespeare Company I have no doubt that this is finally the time for Greenwich Theatre to reclaim its place on the national theatre scene. Alongside our own work, there are also a number of fresh collaborations included in the season - among them a partnership with New Perspectives Theatre Company to present the stage premiere of a show called Farm Boy. Written by former children's laureate Michael Morpurgo, this is the sequel to the West End hit War Horse so it's quite a coup for Greenwich. Then in November we are co-producing a national touring production of Dracula which is set to use circus skills, film and music to tell Bram Stoker's unforgettable tale. That's just a flavour of what's in store, with the full season available on our website. I have no doubt that there is much to be proud of and I'm certainly looking forward to seeing all of the company's hard work coming to fruition. Now all I need to do is think of a way to top it all for the next season...

Opening a vaultful of young film makers

AS one of the five Olympic boroughs hosting the 2012 Games, young people from Greenwich are invited to unlock a vault load of their talents with a new film making challenge. Residents between the ages of 14 and 19 are among the lucky few challenged to make hard-hitting documentary films. The Vault is a project set up to unearth the next Danny Boyle, Donal MacIntyre or Ray Mears in the eternal search for truth - and entertainment - on our screens.

But this time the organisers aren't asking the keen camera crews to track down tax-dodging gangsters or survive in the wild by eating tree bark and sparrows, the subject of the film is the 1948 London Olympics. Taking over the Brady Arts Centre off Brick Lane on Sunday, September 27, the Vault hosts a free day of screenings, workshops and information on how to crack the film industry. The day runs from 10am until 8pm, and all of the films produced will be shown across the UK on the BBC's Big Screens as well as being showcased in the 2010 East End Film Festival. The winning entry will be splashed over a one-hour TV documentary screened in 2012. Organised by the East End Film Festival as a youth film training project, Vault is open to young people from the five Olympic boroughs - Hackney, Newham, Waltham Forest, Greenwich and Tower Hamlets.

To get a place on the day sign up to www.thevaultproject.com and click the link to register or text VAULT to 81025. Sign up before September 7 for your chance to receive a film related prize.

FINAL SCENE

The truth hurts

Iraq war tackled in new movie that combines action, serious content, and a surprising choice of director

↓ THERE have been countless war films made over the years – some good, some bad, and many ugly. Every new conflict throws up scores of all-action flicks – invariably American and invariably heroic and testosterone fuelled. What makes The Hurt Locker original from the outset, is that it was directed by a member of the fairer sex, not a bloke – which is sure to give it a different flavour.

Martin McHugh digested the film... THERE is good reason to think that this film may be nominated for best picture at next year's Oscars. Not only for its technical brilliance but also for good writing and a genuinely dispassionate and apolitical look at America at war. The film is set in present day war-torn Iraq and follows the fortunes of a bomb disposal team. So far, so what? Well, for one thing the film goes a long way toward informing us about what it is really like out there where some of our own people – even our own relatives – may be fighting today. Although it is a great, great entertaining two hours with a lot of action, it is serious too and 'embeds' us into a modern and controversial war in a new and important way. This is such a 'guy' film that I was surprised to discover that it was directed by Kathryn Bigelow – the woman responsible for K-19 – but that may explain the freshness and originality of the film. Very mature acting from a young cast including an impressive Jeremy Renner as Staff Sergeant William James, the iconic main character and some solid support from more established actors.

It is not an actor's film though and reads more as the documentary you always wanted to see but never had the chance.

The Hurt Locker is on now at the Odeon Greenwich, Busby's Way.

Autumn trends from the catwalk

AS the last days of summer fade away, it's time to pack away the gladiator sandals and the maxi dresses and look forward to a whole new season of fashion! And we've done all the hard work for you, by tracking down the latest looks to take you through autumn into winter in style. Here's a sneak preview of what's sure to be hot this autumn:

Tweed and checks

Nothing typifies country living more than tweed and strong, bold checks, but prepare to see these invading the high street over the coming months. Team a check shirt with ripped jeans for a cool and relaxed weekend look. Or, for tweeds and checks to see you through to the night, just add a pair of killer heels. This tailored checked jacket from H&M with a high-fashion belt detail will keep you looking glam and feeling cosy this autumn.

Eighties

Forget Kate Moss and Sienna Miller, think Madonna and Cyndi Lauper as your style icons this season. The Eighties are being resurrected to take us into a new decade with plenty of shoulder pads and Lycra. Team off-the-shoulder tops and tunics with leggings for an easy-to-wear Lycra look. Next have this fabulous graffiti and punk style T-Shirt – the perfect partner to black ankle zip leggings and ideal for dining out with the girls.

Leather

It's not only about biker boots and jeans, leather becomes more grown-up and ladylike this autumn. Pair a leather jacket or some studded ankle boots with elegant skirts and floaty dresses to give femininity a rock chic edge. A leather biker style jacket will look perfect dressed down with jeans and a vest, or with a pretty blouse or dress for evening glamour. Spritz yourself in Vera Wang's limited edition perfume, Rock Princess, available at Boots, to bring out your inner rock chick.

Live music

Incognito uncovered at IndigO2

NOW that's what I call a night out! Two and three quarter hours of live music by one of the UK's top bands followed by a two-hour after party led by soulclub DJs.

It's a sign of my age that I couldn't quite hack it to the 2am finish but I sneaked out of Incognito's 30th anniversary concert half an hour earlier a happy and satisfied gig goer. The jazz/soul outfit hosted the anniversary celebration of music and song on August 22 – it had an intimate feel despite a crowd of around 2,000 fans. We were treated to a 20-plus set of songs from the band's back catalogue spanning three decades. The sound was sharp – and loud – and the infectious rhythms of each song got the buzzing crowd moving within the opening chords, whether you were new to Incognito or a diehard fan.

DISGUISE THE LIMIT: Incognito's Bluey

I loved the fact that the stage was crowded with a melange of musicians of every nationality. They included a brass trio and a string ensemble who punctuated the soul, funk and latin vibes with blasting jazz horns and soothing classical interludes. The band's two singers each had a turn under the spotlight and their vocals were quite a match for the voices of soul divas Jocelyn Brown and Maysa Leak who have featured on Incognito's biggest hits. Jocelyn was billed as the special guest on the pre-concert publicity but when band leader Bluey announced the velvet-voiced Maysa as the 'surprise guest' my night was made. The American singers slipped on and off the stage to sing live renditions of Incognito classics such as Always There and Don't You Worry 'Bout a Thing. Their duet of Nights over Egypt by the Jones Girls ended the show and provided another fine example of a classic soul gem given the magical Incognito makeover. The show was the latest in a series of Ultimate Boogie Nights at the IndigO2 – and boogie I did!

Chris savours Ashes moment

THANKS ATHERS: Chris Swadkin receives his award at the Oval

CHRIS Swadkin, the borough's 'Mr Cricket', enjoyed his own Ashes moment at the Oval when his outstanding services to the grass roots game was recognised with an award presented by Sky Sports presenter and ex-England captain Michael Atherton.

He was one of just seven coaches from southern England to receive the 'Reward and Recognition' from Sky Sports as part of their ECB Coach Education Programme.

The Blackheath CC member and leading light in the cricket development group that works in Greenwich schools and organises district teams at primary and secondary levels, received his award during the fifth Ashes-winning Test.

He was chosen for the award after "consistently displaying dedication

by Peter Cordwell

and professionalism" at county and district level as well as within Blackheath CC. Blackheath Under 15s won the national competition, and the club's results have steadily improved in recent years.

Chris said: "The benefits of Sky Sports sponsoring grass roots cricket are fantastic. It is so important to improve the levels of coaching in local clubs, to be able to develop cricket as a game on the pitch. Without the help of Sky Sports this would not be possible."

Since the beginning of Sky's sponsorship in 2006 nearly 13,000 coaches have gone through the scheme, more than double the original target and for every professional cricketer in England and Wales, there are now over 60 grass root coaches.

method. Lloyd Sam is hardly renowned for his heading ability but reminded superannuated locals of ex-Rover Dixie Dean by popping up at the far post, climbing prodigiously high to meet Shelvey's deep cross and guiding a classic centre forward's header back across Davies into the opposite corner.

It was a rare goal from Sam and was followed instantly by an equally rare contribution from Jose Semedo. Committing himself forward to combine with Burton, the holding midfielder ran on to Burton's clever flick, fought off Ian Goodison's challenge and found the net off the left post. It was Semedo's first goal for Charlton and meant that, as a contest, this one was over.

were the best Rovers managed before they were put out of their misery three minutes after the break. Again, Sam excelled by meeting Kelly Youga's pinpointed cross, again at the far post, to head neatly down inside the post.

Confident, classy Charlton were doing as they pleased. And when they weren't good, they were lucky, as skipper Nicky Bailey proved by claiming his third goal of the season on 67 minutes. His curving cross from the left touchline was clearly intended for Burton but continued on its unmolested way into the net, with Davies distracted by the striker's presence. What remained were the mere formalities of a resounding away win.

Manager Phil Parkinson won't allow anyone to get carried away but there will be quiet satisfaction at his side's start. Their performance as much as the result was outstanding. These Addicks are flying - for the time being, anyway.

First class academy

FROM KIDS TOM FIRST TEAM: some of those who 'made it' to the first team - with Richard Rufus (right)

TWO hours before the important game with Walsall kicked off at The Valley, Bartram's lounge was the place to be for assorted Charlton fans and ex-players.

The occasion was the formal unveiling, by no less an Addicks legend than Richard Rufus, of an honours board recording the names of players, who rose from the Academy ranks to senior level.

Since the successful Valley Gold scheme, whose 1,800 members have helped contribute £250,000 to youth development, was set up in 1989, 39 youngsters have achieved that feat. The first of them was popular striker Gordon Watson, the latest 18-year old midfielder Alex Stavrinou, who made his debut at Hereford on August 11. On hand to supervise proceedings was Wendy Perfect, promoter of Charlton Club, which oversees Valley Gold. Lifelong stalwart Wendy proudly pointed out: "Our squad at Leyton Orient in midweek featured six youth team graduates. And the board includes the likes of Paul Konchesky and Scott Parker, who went on to play for England." Still looking fit enough to play, Richard Rufus recalled with affection his early days at Sparrows Lane. "I loved my time there except when John Yarrnton made us do the hoovering after training! I wasn't keen on that but I owed so much to the coaching and guidance of Colin Clarke and John Cartwright." Current Charlton manager Phil Parkinson paid his own tribute to the Academy by releasing all seven young players in his Walsall squad to attend the ceremony. Among them was 19-year-old winger Scott Wagstaff, who later scored his first-ever senior goal to seal victory over Walsall.
